In General:

- Photos are best if taken from a distance of 10+ feet. You can use your zoom to frame the photo, or crop it at a later time. Crouching down a bit for the photo also helps give a more pleasing & true view.
- Take photos with the sun at your back. Try to make sure shadows are not interfering with the visibility of the legs.
- Take photos in a spot with no distractions in the background.
- The handler should stand far enough back that they can be omitted from the photo.

Side views

1. Be at 90 degrees to horse, standing at his mid-section.
2. Horse should be standing with all 4 legs squarely underneath him, as possible. Include multiple shots if you are not able to get both front & hind legs lined up in the same photo.
3. One of these photos MUST show the horse with at least 1 hind leg standing perpendicular to the ground.

Front view:

1. Horse should be standing with all 4 legs squarely underneath him, as possible. Front legs should be in a natural position under the horse and as evenly placed as possible.
2. If the forelock is long, pull it off to the side to see the face markings clearly.
3. Take the photo from DIRECTLY IN FRONT of the horse with the horse looking forward.

Hind view:

1. Horse should be standing with all 4 legs squarely underneath him, as possible. Hind legs should be in a natural position under the horse and as evenly placed as possible.
2. It is important to see how the hind legs are positioned so if the tail is long and/or full, tie the tail up or have someone hold it off to the side.

Head shot:

Please include a nice face/head shot of the horse. Here are a couple examples. Ears should be forward. This can be cropped from another photo as well.

Special shots:

For horses with white markings on their legs, chin spots or paint patterned horses, please include additional photos to detail their markings. Samples below.
